Dear Mr. George:

As a result of the new security measures put into effect on Capitol Hill, many of your people have found it difficult to enter the Senate office buildings in order to make appointments or attend hearings. With the tourist season soon to be upon us, entering these buildings could become even more difficult due to long lines of people waiting to be processed through our security checkpoints. Therefore, we have designated a special entrance that you and your employees may use as long as you have your government IDs with you. This entrance is at First and C Streets, N.E., Dirksen Senate Office Building. The general public will not be permitted to use this entrance, therefore you should no longer encounter long waiting lines. We have designated this entrance in the Dirksen Senate Office Building due to the fact that a majority of committee hearings are held in this building. We hope that this change will make it easier for you when you visit the United States Senate.

While the First and C Street entrance is reserved for your use, you should continue to feel free to use any of the other public entrances we have in the Senate office buildings. In addition, the North and South entrances of the Capitol Building are also reserved for your special use.

If you or your colleagues have any questions or problems regarding these new security measures, we hope you will feel free to contact us.

Sincerely,

Larry E. Smith
Sergeant at Arms
